THE LATE ELBUTONE.

It cannot escape the attention of our reader that the late elections are resulting magnifescing for the persuit administration, and for the country. Previous to that which took plass in New Hampshire has month, there was much solicitate in loyal circles, and great expectations among to rebels. The vote had been so close a year ago, and a number of other heats were so inasspicious for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the burlon cause, this great fiess were fait for the safety of the Siste; and if New Hampshire deletion that was to follow. It is true that most of them have been stocal, and therefore liable to be overraled in importance. And yet there is a significance in the fact that the tide reans all in one way. The nam who call themselves pennocrate are commonly good at voting on a small scale as well as on a large one, and are usually as prompt to carry a canvass for a constable as for a President. The city, county, and town elections, therefore, which things are working.

But the Connecticut election is worthy of special aftention. It is true that our expectation which at the search of the comperheads sunk below zero, whe have not been disappointed was forced to the constense to go upon it is belly and pet full the condition of the present difficulties; a conclusion which none but a nake secasion of the conference of their failure. Even the Twee is the solution of the present difficulties; a conclusion which none but a nakes access, nor do wa think the Copperheads ar

THE WILD-CAT CURRENCY.
The ten Western States are supporting THE WILLS-CAT CUBRENCY.
The ten Western States are supporting a wild-cat circulation of not less than one hundred millions of dollars—it may be nearer one hundred and fifty millions, but call it the former figure. Every dollar of this trash crowds out a dollar of greenbacks. The people of the West are lending one hundred millions of their property to Eastern shipplaster venders, instead of lending it to the Government, that midds it. And they are paying the Eastern wild-cat "banks" at least ten per cent in interest and exchange, or len millions annually, on this hundred millions of their stuff. Why should we of the West pay the private corporations of the East, called "banks," ten millions of dollars on their called the pay and pay then interest thereon, and then suffer a shave of a quarter thereon, and then suffer a shave of a quarter thereon, and then suffer a shave of a quarter to three-quarters per cent when we want to purchase a bill of exchange with it. And while we are using and holding this hundred millions of Eastern wild-cat, Secretary Chase is obliged to horrow one hundred millions of dollars, on which he pays five per cent interest in gold or cight and a half per cent in paper. To make up this interest, eight mill lions five hundred thousand dollars of catra taxes must be added to the burden of the West. By expelling this hundred millions of un-

The statement that has been made through the public press, that Builter and Ould, at their regent conference, agreed upon a satisfactory plan for the exchange of prisoners is incorrect. The quastion concerning officers and men of negro regiments continues to be an obstacle of fiscal to overcome. On the public route of the position ... and of trace; men who claim to be for the war, but who go verything to embarrass and hinder it; creaping about as spice in the loval camm; as exing as a reserve force of the robellion, ready to strike, should they see a good occasion in the weaknest or peril of the country. Bull it was an unlocky thing for the allies of the rebellion in the North, that their real aim abouth the burst down, so that no smoke should be vibilited out—that the fire they have been working with might and main to keep amothered down, so that no smoke should be vibilited out—that the fire they have been working with might and main to keep alive and glowing—should all at once shoot up in jets of flame to the endangering of all their concurs with hideous conflagration.

It is well for the country. It is well for the country that all partice should be truly understood. We want no enemies in ambush, let each side of the question stand our clear to the public apprehension. If it he copperheads want peace at my rate; and if to get it are willing to grant the independence of the Confederacy let them say so. Those who oppose the war and are not ready for this, struitly themselves of course; by there is no human law which forbids a man from making a donkey of himself if he only pays the price of the cars needed to set him off; and yet donkeys are not wanted in Congress, nor an excess of them any bere. Still, if they are donkeys let them bray—bray lustily, and often. Let their ears faunt out like banners!

But such men can have no complaint to make if taken at their word and thrust out of Congress. For if a man is a secsosionist—believes the rebels to be right, and ought to have their independence—what business has be in the Congress of the United States. Let him go to his own. Speaker Colinx did well, then, to more promptly for Long's expalsion. Twen it may not be carried, since there are other rebellion especially, that nothing is the beauty for the pays the country and the rebellion especially, that nothing is the beauty for the care the count it indicates an approval of the present adminiteration of the Government and a considence in its faleity and widom which the malitynames will do well to take notice of. These disctions have occurred since it has been indicated that the present incumbent of the Presidential chair would be pretty surely nominated as his own successor. They have a reference to the great measures of his Administration—his Proclamations of Freedom and Amnesty—his plans of reconspraction, and his management of the army. They indicate a sattification with the military ancesses of the time in which his declaration is made. In the Amnesty—his plans of reconstruction, and his management of the srmy. They ndicate a sattefaction with the military accesses of the past season, and the expectation of others ander the present leaders.

These selections have an unmistakable bearing upon the future, and will effect without inliner the presidential context. The N.T.

World attributes the late successes to a delirium of the people which it is sure will pass away before the Presidential election. Doctor Wood may be a good physician, and be able to predict as to the health of the Amselean public for so long a period; but he luspires no confidence in his skill at present. The true we cannot say what if the presidential context will, or will be some accuse for sentiments like Long's. In the world in the world in the luspires no confidence in his skill at present. The true we cannot say what will, or will be considered, and when we have actually succeeded in getting the rebellion under, so that only another great effort is needed to faish it; and after all the secritices of money are in the present of the present of the south, admits of no pallistics. Mr. SEWARD has recommended a plan of tree immigration from Europe, which, there is no doubt, would have a very beneficial affect upon the country. We greatly seed mechanics of all kinds, miners, laborers, &c. I learn, however, that it will be sirongly opposed, especially in the Senate, principally on the ground of the financial condition of the country, and perhaps because leading Senators bare presented their plane on the same subject, in which they take too much of a paternal interest to allow them to be interested with.

"Don't say so, lass; it'll be all right when the doctor comes."

"No, Bill; I feel better, but something tells me I've put on the logs for the last lime."

"No, lass, no!" was all the utterance he could find. "Don't say so."

After a panes, whe said; "Bill, you recollect that London chap with the French name that came down to the Doncaster races "Oh, yes, I know," said the man, half sangrily, as if wishing to avoid the subject. "Well, you know you said that time that you thought there was something between me and him"

"Well, I know it," said the man, "but, don't think of that now; don't fromble about that now".

"Well, and ishould like you to think of me when I am gone, us I am truly, Bill."

The man made no answer.

"Bill," said the woman, with increasing veherence of manner, "do you believe I'd tell you a lie now."

No answer still.

"Bill! Jo you think I'd tell you a lie now?" said she, as though her life depended on his nawer.

"400" said he, pointing to the hody.
"How can I go? No, I can't go."
"Well, Bill, you must, its only the second night; here's the queen away, and no clows."

"Well, Bill, you must. Its only the second night; here's the queen away, and no clown.

"Well, there's only the Indian Warrior to go is," said Bill.

"Well, I know that; but what's the good of him without somebody to give his things? What's the good of my giving, him his club and bow, or the paddle either? No, Bill, you must go; it won't do to send in any one else now; they'd pull the place down."

Here another and londer cry reached them.

ij "These now," said Whips, "that's it; there's the 'Corsican Brothers' has been a going treuzed this quarter of an hour, till they're else k Git, and the gray il be so lame to morrow she went sidr a pag. If's nowe, Bill; you must go."

"I can't, Whips; it'll be no nee if I do."

"Ohys, you will; you must go, or I'll have to throw up the agreement, and you know you're overdrawed your money this last two weeks."

"Well, I know it." said the man, evidently
